HEALTH CARE

Networking for better mental health and inclusion

GLOBAL ISSUES

In 73 UN member countries, the right to medical services is codified as a constitutional right and the situation is trending upward.⁷

The reality on the ground, however, is much different. Whereas many governments may publicly support health care for all, resourcing for adequate health care remains a challenge. Only 18 countries, which include Canada, Australia and several European countries, offer true universal health care coverage. Others aspire to meet the medical needs of their citizenry, but often fall short in resourcing. Only 14% of countries worldwide guarantee public health.⁸

While life expectancy and child mortality continue to steadily improve, more people are seeking treatment for issues related to mental health. The World Health Organization reports that one in four people in the world will be affected by mental or neurological disorders at some point in their lives. The Centers for Disease Control estimates that depression is the second most common cause of disability in the world (after heart disease) with secondary effects on family, friends and communities. Yet services for mental health are poor, and there are worldwide shortages of professionals like psychiatrists and nurses and mental health institutions. Connecting with care is an uphill battle – from both an institutional and individual perspective.

NEW IDEAS

The challenges of access to treatment and stigmas were a prominent issue being tackled by 24 of the 2019 Ashoka Fellows. From mental to maternal health, Fellows are improving community cohesion, problem-solving, and awareness across the globe.

Destigmatizing mental health and addiction

Around the world, mental health issues affecting children are often overlooked and often stigmatized. Parents are embarrassed by children who are differently abled or who display mental health challenges and very few understand the roots of mental issues and lack work together to buffer and protect the child in all the settings where they have interactions. Each segment of individuals is equipped with tools like positive reinforcement, safety and inclusion, child psychology or positive parenting. Michael has influenced 3,000 people to set healthy living and learning environments for children in eight governates across Egypt. He's also creating a Resource Bank of tools to enable people to replicate the model across the Arab World.

Drug and alcohol addiction is a public health crisis that affects over 21 million individuals in US.⁹ As a disease of isolation, what is most needed for individuals to improve is to rebuild positive connections devoid of the knowledge of what support would truly look like. In Egypt, mental health professional Michael ElNemais Fawzy realized that customs, taboos and culture need to be taken into consideration while building a new healthcare model that targeted parents and teachers. HOPE is a dynamic resilience program to help children who need mental health support. Recognizing that parents would not trust strangers to treat their children, he works holistically with family, teachers and other key individuals in a child's life. Parents, teachers and social service providers are trained to know the difference between challenging but typical developmental behaviors and those that can cause concern. When there is reason for intervention, the different parties stigma. Scott Strobe builds healing communities of people in recovery and uses fitness tool to harness the transformative power of human connection. His series of Phoenix gyms provide activities like rock climbing and yoga which in turn create spaces for physical and emotional safety, inclusivity and accessibility. The only membership fee to join a Phoenix gym is 48 hours of sobriety and the gym is entirely staffed by people in recovery who were trained to address their own trauma and can serve as peer role models for others. This approach increases the numbers of caregivers and builds community to support those working to overcome addiction.

Networking providers for systemic change

In Zambia, only 47% births are attended by a skilled health worker at a health institution. In addition to limited governmental healthcare facilities and a doctor-patient ratio of 1 to 12,000, mothers who give birth at healthcare institutions are also required to bring birthing materials. This leads to many women deciding to give birth at home attended to by an experienced family member or a community birth attendant. Muzalema Mwanza's Safe Motherhood Alliance is growing a network of trained Traditional Birthing Assistants who are supplied with affordable pre-packaged birth kits that contain essential sterile birthing material. With the National Ministry of Health, they train attendants in modern birthing practices and support the delivery of babies. The network has increased community knowledge on birthing practices, demystified unsafe practices and increased connections for expectant and new mothers with clinics. 1,000 babies have been delivered safely in 5 health centers and clinics by 30 traditional birth attendants since the birth kit was promoting effective handwashing techniques, installing alcohol-based hand sanitizer dispensers, soap dispensers and other equipment in clinics. She advocates for nurses to have access to the same or similar trainings as doctors. Through NECH-CIEH, nurses not only provide hospitals and clinics with needed materials for necessary proper hand hygiene, they are at the forefront in changing behaviors toward greater hygiene for patients and guests.

Germana Soares contracted the Zika virus during her pregnancy with her first child who, subsequently, was born with microcephaly. Recognizing the challenge of raising a child affected by Zika, she set up União das Mães de Anjos – the Union of Mothers of Angels. It is an association of mothers and children that acts as a support network to exchange information and experience, raise awareness about rights, challenge the current healthcare system, and address gaps in medical care launched. Muzalema's partnership with the Ministry has enabled her to begin expansion to all 3,500 clinics around the country.

Health and medicine are a mirror on society, and this is evident in Haiti where a fragmented healthcare system underutilizes the rich resources of nurses. Claudia Thomas Riché creates change by transforming nurses into change agents who lead innovative solutions to address Haiti's public health challenges. The Education Collaborative for Haiti (NECH-CIEH) is a network of nurses who are expanding their knowledge and bridging health and community development within and beyond clinic walls. Nurses at NECH-CIEH train others in the field to become hygiene ambassadors and educators by and government aid. These mothers are powerfully pressing for change and providing solid data about Zika to influence public policies. Germana's work has led to the approval of laws that provides free anticonvulsive medications for people with disabilities and makes children with the congenital syndrome of Zika virus a social priority. After struggling to find a daycare with appropriate facilities, she worked within the courts to make it obligatory for schools to accommodate children with developmental disabilities. Her network is also socializing families to send their children to school. This has the two-fold effect of improving their cognitive development and creating a wider culture of tolerance that embraces the children as they grow.

SPOTLIGHT ON:

Innovation in eating disorder support

Without good information or effective communication strategies, young adults often struggle with another common, but complicated mental health challenge – eating disorders – and do not know how or when to ask for help. The Never Give Up organization, founded by Simona Sinesi works to reframe eating disorders and destigmatize an issue that is prevalent in Italian society. Self-discovery is the most important tool for young adults and teenagers to dig deeper into their personal habits while dealing with food-related illnesses. The Never Give Up Experience is an emotional audio-visual food workshop that is held at public spaces like concerts and schools, to create acceptance around the issues of food-related disorders. The program breaks down the stigma of asking for help by providing free, on-site support from a psychotherapist team, with an assurance to respond to emails within 24 hours. While still in early stages, Never Give Up is focusing on advocacy, early diagnosis and evidence-based treatment and post-treatment resources.

In the US, 1 in 10 individuals experience an eating disorder in their lifetimes. To eliminate the barriers to treatment, Kristina Saffran's Project HEAL is challenging the mental healthcare system to think differently about access. She brings together key stakeholders like insurance companies and treatment providers so that those who are afflicted with eating disorders have more financially accessible options. The current coverage model for eating disorders only pays for a certain number of therapy sessions or a limited duration of time in in-patient treatment programs. Kristina proposes a treat-to-outcome model, which commits to providing treatment until wellness milestones are reached.

THE OPPORTUNITY

As part of a continuing commitment to systemic change in the field of health, Making More Health, Ashoka's long-term partnership with Boehringer Ingelheim, continues to host the popular online professional development course on Social Intrapreneurship for Innovation in Health. Drawing from the insights of Ashoka Fellows working in health and focused on topics like the business case for social intrapreneurship, co-creation, challenges and opportunities, and strategies for advancing social intrapreneurship within institutions, the course has enabled health professionals from a diverse mix of public and private sector health professions, social entrepreneurs, students and business executives to connect. Nearly 500 participants participate annually with 70% pledging to start an intrapreneurial project or action after the course.

ABOUT ASHOKA

Ashoka launched the field of social entrepreneurship in 1980 and today is the largest global association of systems changing social entrepreneurs in the world.

Ashoka believes the most powerful force for change in the world is a new idea in the hands of the right person. Our social entrepreneurs embody these values and continue to forge new paths, transform domains and showcase unexpected ideas to create large-scale social impact.

Leading social entrepreneurs are not heroes working in isolation. Their success depends on creating roles for ordinary people — parents, refugees, computer scientists, farmers, young people — to play an important part in the solution. With each new leading social entrepreneur that we nurture, Ashoka is creating a different kind of future: one where each of us looks inside ourselves and sees a changemaker.

As Ashoka turns 40, we reflect on what it means to be truly successful. For us it means an 'Everyone a changemaker' world.

METHODS

ASHOKA'S APPROACH TO SUPPORTING TOMORROW'S SOCIAL INNOVATIONS

After 40 years of electing the world's leading systems changing social entrepreneurs, Ashoka knows how to find new ideas. For this analysis of our 2019 Fellows, we tapped into the resources of Ashoka's selection process to mine the reports, interview notes, reflections, and writings of our teams across the globe who are expert innovation spotters and who have deeply examined the work of potential Fellows. The learnings, patterns, and insights we cull during the rich Fellow selection process provided the baseline data for this report.

ASHOKA FELLOW SELECTION PROCESS

The average Fellow candidate will speak to 8 people during their process of election and it can take up to a year to be elected into the Fellowship. The process includes the following steps:

Nominate

Ashoka receives nominations from staff, volunteers, partners, Ashoka Fellows, and nominators, based on the five criteria for Ashoka Fellowship. While Ashoka's primary source for nominations is through our network of volunteer nominators, we also actively search for new ideas in emerging and under-represented fields, and welcome self-nominations from social entrepreneurs who believe they meet Ashoka's criteria.

First Opinion

The local Ashoka Venture team reviews the nominations to identify a key social innovation. In order to ensure that the candidate is a good fit for the Ashoka criteria, they conduct site visits and meet with the candidate, and then review their work in-depth with other experts in the field.

Second Opinion

A senior Ashoka representative with extensive experience in the field of social entrepreneurship reviews the work of the candidate with the local Venture team. The Second Opinion interviewer will always come from a different continent than the candidate so they can bring objectivity to the process and assess the potential of the idea to be applied elsewhere. The Second Opinion interviewer will have an in-depth conversation about the innovation in the idea, its potential for sparking sector-wide system change, and the candidate's fit for the Ashoka criteria.

In addition, three to four leading social and business entrepreneurs from the same country/region will interview the candidate. These entrepreneurs can assess the innovation and its potential impact in the local context. The panel then convenes as a group and, facilitated by the Second Opinion interviewer, decides by consensus whether they recommend that the Ashoka board elects this candidate as an Ashoka Fellow.

Board Review

Ashoka's Global Board of Directors reviews the candidate's case in light of observations made by the local Venture team, Second Opinion interviewer, and panelists. After assessing the candidate's fit with the criteria and alignment with Ashoka's mission, they make a final decision about whether to select the candidate as an Ashoka Fellow.

5 CRITERIA FOR THE ASHOKA FELLOWSHIP

Ashoka's selection process is anchored by our five criteria against which all Fellow candidates are evaluated:

- 1 A NEW IDEA: Candidates must have a new idea—a new solution or approach to a social problem—that will change the pattern in a field. We evaluate the idea historically and against its contemporaries in the field, looking for innovation and real change potential. Candidates must have a truly transformational innovation, not just a tweak to how things are done currently.
- 2 CREATIVITY: Successful social entrepreneurs are creative both as goal-setting visionaries and as problem solvers that can engineer their visions into reality. Among the questions we might ask are: Does the candidate have a history of creating other new visions?
- 3 ENTREPRENEURIAL QUALITY: Successful social entrepreneurs are driven by the vision of solving the problem they are working on. They typically will not rest until their idea is the new pattern for society. At the same time, they are willing to grapple relentlessly with many practical “how to” challenges. A successful candidate, if given the means, would dedicate themselves full time to launching and growing their idea.
- 4 SOCIAL IMPACT OF THE IDEA: The candidate's new idea has the potential to change the field significantly and will trigger nationwide impact. The idea itself needs to be sufficiently new, practical, and useful for people working in the field to adopt it and turn it into the new norm sector wide.
- 5 ETHICAL FIBER: Social entrepreneurs introducing major structural changes to society will have to inspire that change at a wide scale and across different stakeholder groups. If the entrepreneur is not trusted, the likelihood of success is significantly reduced. Ashoka insists that every participant in the selection process be assessed for ethical fiber.

Throughout the five stages of our election process, we gather data and information about the Fellow through application forms, field visits, and semi-structured interviews. We see the process as generative; as much as we are seeking to understand the insights and motivations of our Fellows to make systemic and lasting change in their communities, we are also hoping that our questions, frameworks, and perspectives will enable the candidates to feel they are gaining new approaches and networks.

Based on a 2018 study of Ashoka's impact, 93% of 858 Fellows in 74 countries agreed that the Ashoka selection process helped strengthen and articulate their idea.

POST SELECTION PROCESS ANALYSIS

The materials we gathered from 78 profiles this year were then taken through a qualitative analysis. We generated codes in four categories:

HOW

the approaches, how-to's and strategies Fellows use.

WHY

the motivation and insight into why a Fellow founded their organization or began their work.

WHO

the core constituent groups who Fellows target.

SECTOR

the field of work or externally recognized sector Fellows operate within.

We ran a network analysis, grouping the codes by type and looking for patterns and intersections across geographies, sectors, approaches and constituencies. The process also allowed us to explore a deeper understanding of each Fellow's unique ability to connect with multiple approaches to work at a systems level.

NEXT NOW

Pathways for an Emerging Future

Next Now is focused on changing the course of history by uniting visionary changemakers around bold goals.

Together, this ecosystem of leaders will build a brighter future. One that addresses and anticipates the world's most urgent social challenges and one in which no one gets left behind. What comes Next – our most desirable future – must start Now.

Next Now is piloting a new type of collective action around four pressing global challenges: Tech and Humanity, Aging, Gender, and Planet & Climate. Our path to success depends on our ability to:

- 1 Invest in new social innovators shaping each field
- 2 Set audacious and collective goals with visionary changemakers
- 3 Team up across sectors to achieve these goals (Teampreneurship)
- 4 Amplify insights and lessons learned to inform the next set of audacious goals

Tech & Humanity

All aspects of our lives are now impacted by technology. Examples of radical breakthroughs of positive change abound – such as personalized learning, health care, micro-loans and the sharing economy. But these same technological advances bring challenges. Unprecedented levels of surveillance are threatening civil rights. Technology embeds bias and discrimination through opaque algorithms. Countless other ethical and moral dilemmas emerge.

Next Now: Tech & Humanity audaciously aims to change the course of history by uniting leaders around goals to develop ethical frameworks that change the policies that govern the public and private sectors.

Aging

Demographic change will define this century. By 2030, it is estimated that there will be more people over the age of 60 than children younger than 10. This is a phenomenon with deep social and economic implications. The narrative on aging has been largely alarmist and portrays Seniors as burdens on social systems. But the shift also represents a unique opportunity to shape the future of humanity. Insights from the nearly 60 Ashoka Fellows working on aging shows that systems-changing social innovations solutions can radically reimagine aging culture, seniors' contributions to society, and how seniors are cared for.

Guided by these and future insights, Next Now: Aging aims to change the course of history and unite leaders around audacious goals that promote intergenerational harmony, dignity and purpose for all seniors.

Gender

Gender equity is a moral and a business imperative. Unconscious bias remains prevalent across geographies, and in every venue imaginable—from classrooms to board rooms. Fortunately, some key innovators are identifying the jujitsu points capable of shifting entire systems to address challenges for women and individuals who identify as LGBTQ. Their solutions like combining behavioral design with empowerment, focusing on sectors of strategic importance, and re-framing and deconstructing gender.

Next Now: Gender will unite extraordinary changemakers around audacious goals to build equitable, diverse and accessible societies.

Planet & Climate

Of the many global challenges we face today, few are as essential to each of us as climate change. While humans have enjoyed the convenience and comfort brought about by the Industrial Revolution, many of us have also lost touch with nature and as a result, directly and indirectly contributed to global warming and climate change.

Next Now: Planet & Climate aims to change the course of history by uniting extraordinary changemakers around audacious goals that bring people and planet to a new equilibrium.
